

Download What Makes A Mammal A Mammal

What makes an animal a mammal are several things. First, they must have glands that give milk. This is to feed their babies. Second, they are warm-blooded. Third, all mammals have fur or hair. Humans are mammals and so are dogs, whales, elephants, and horses. Most mammals have teeth with the exception of the ant eater which doesn't have any teeth. A mammal is normally defined as a warm blooded animal with a covering of fur, skin or hair which gives birth to live young who are nourished with milk, and who are vertebrate. Dig deeper and choose a mammal to research and write a report about. You can use this animal report printable. Habitats. List habitats and what mammals live there and what characteristics they possess that make it possible for them to survive; Compare and contrast different mammals. Use Venn diagrams or same/different lists. A man walked into a movie theater and picked a prime seat. As he was starting to munch on his popcorn, he noticed what looked like a whale sitting a few seats over., What Makes A Mammal A Mammal.

Other Files :