Perhaps the most highly regarded French filmmaker after Jean Renoir, Robert Bresson created a new kind of cinema through meticulous refinement of the form's grammatical and expressive possibilities. As a relatively minor example of the same sort of expedient short-cut, Pipolo states in his Introduction that Bresson "virtually never" used the same actors twice in his films. Acknowledgments. The films of Robert Bresson have been an important part of my life for over forty years. Inevitably this means that conversations, debates, and discussions with numerous people ...
